Distillery and Castle Itinerary by Public Transport

Get off at the 2nd stop on Urquhart Road in Oldmeldrum, and you should see a brown sign ahead of the bus stop pointing to the left for the Glen Garioch Distillery, and it's only a 5 minute walk to the Single Malt.

Come and see time-honoured skills at work, touch and smell the natural ingredients used in its production, hear from the master craftsmen involved and finally (the best bit), taste the fruit of their labours. A number of tours of the distillery are available, including the option to bottle your own wee drop of Glen Garioch. The basic Founders Tour does not require pre-booking and they commence at 11am, 1pm & 3pm.

Return to the same bus stop and again jump on the 35/35A bus, which will take you onto Fyvie Castle.

Glen Garioch

Fyvie Castle

It's a 20 minute walk up to the castle from the bus stop, through its beautiful estate.

The history of the castle starts in the early 13th century and boasts a large collection of arms, armour and paintings, including works by Gainsborough and one of the largest private collections of Raeburn's in the world. The sumptuous interiors also add to Fyvie's charm, with an impressive collection of tapestries and fine furniture. Just watch out for the many ghosts said to wander the corridors of the castle.

Make sure you leave time to enjoy the gardens; the 18th century walled garden has recently been re-developed and is now brimming with Scottish fruit and vegetables. In fact if time allows the Lochside Walk offers a relaxing stroll around the grounds, taking in the loch and the abundance of wildlife that have made their home in the grounds - from red squirrels, otters and even on occasion, osprey's. It even includes a visit to one of the UK's first 10-pin bowling alleys!

After an afternoon enjoying the tranquillity of the Fyvie Estate, meander back to the bus stop and catch the Stagecoach 35/35A back to Aberdeen.
